Inabaknon Proverbs: Retrieval and Translation into English

Maria Alfe Gordo-Banawis, Dall

Associate Professor V, Languages and Communication Department, College of Arts and Communication
University of Eastern Philippines, Catarman, Northern Samar

Abstract: This ethnolinguistic study retrieved and translated into English the proverbs of the people of Capul, Northern Samar. Specifically, it categorized the Inabaknon proverbs according to nature, range of subject matter, form and style; find out its structure; noted the extra-linguistic features; determined the figurative language used; find out how the culture or worldview of the people are reflected; and knew the techniques employed in the translation. One hundred sixty (160) proverbs were collected and analyzed. It was categorized for their general attitudes towards life and laws that govern life, ethical, system of values, general truths and observations about life, humorous, and miscellaneous. It revealed that proverbs were prose statements in couplets with neither rhyme nor measure both in the original text and the English translation. Conditional construction, analogy, simile, metaphor, hyperbole, contrast, comparison, and parallelism were the figurative language used. The functions were restraining, regulating, advising and tempering. The extra-linguistic features were hand gestures and facial expressions to state the degree of seriousness as to the proverb’s wisdom and spirit. The dominant worldview reflected is the Capuleño’s religiosity. Free and word for word translation, functional and descriptive equivalent, and paraphrasing were utilized.

Keywords: Proverbs, retrieval, translation, extra-linguistic, traditional bearer

1. Introduction

The genius, wit, and spirit of a nation are discovered in its proverbs.

- Francis Bacon

Learning the language of other people includes a knowledge of the culture of these people. Proverbs are a good source of language study for they reflect both the culture and the language.

The island of Samar is one of the rich hunting grounds for indigenous art and literature. In the skill in proverb making, the people of Leyte and Samar have been productive. Collecting these proverbs, however, began almost as a historical accident.

A famous line has it that “brevity is the soul of wit”. Brevity with wisdom is found at its best in proverbial sayings. The most primitive of men coin sayings founded on common experiences and observations. There sapiential pronouncements when taken together embody the wisdom and philosophy of a people.

Proverbs had been in use by Filipinos long before the coming of the Spaniards to the Philippine shores and have managed to survive to this day through constant use handed down from generation to generation.

Proverbs are said to be an effective means of transmitting folk wisdom to succeeding generations since, they are marked by the use of wit and brevity (Eugenio, 1995). However, the preservation of such oral literature has not yet been given much emphasis in Northern Samar since few of the present studies conducted focused on riddles, folksongs, legends, folktales and other vernacular literature.

Moreover, it is sometimes said that the proverb is going out of fashion or that, it has generated into a cliché. But the proverb had nonetheless retained its popularity as a homely commentary on life, as reminders that the wisdom of one’s ancestors may still be useful today. Proverbs continue as the early collectors never tired of stating them – to provide the source to relish the meat of ordinary speech (Simpson, 1982).

In view of this, the preservation of the folk’s oral and vernacular literature in some remote areas requires attention. It attested to the fact that Northern Samar is a fertile ground for oral and vernacular literature.

Inabaknon sounds queer and unique, is entirely different from Samarnon. Stressing the urgency of putting Inabaknon in the mainstream of Filipino literature, this research collected Inabaknon proverbs which are translated to the English language for non-native speakers of NinorteSamarnon. The collected proverbs will help present a concept of the people of Capul, Northern Samar, their life, appreciation, expressions, observations, and ways of valuing. It is hoped that this bilingual collection of Inabaknon maxims and proverbs will interest the readers in general but be of special value to students and translators of the main languages.

For the above reasons, the researcher aimed to retrieve and translate the proverbs that are popular among Capuleño’s, their lives as human beings, as Samareños, as Filipinos, and as citizens of the world having something in common with those from other cultures.

2. Objectives of the Study

The researcher aimed to retrieve and translate into English the proverbs of the people of Capul, Northern Samar.
Specifically, it is intended to: (1) collect Inabaknon proverbs and translate them into the English language; (2) categorized the proverbs according to the nature and range of subject matter and form and style; (3) find out the structure of the proverbs; (4) take note the extra-linguistic features accompanying the Inabaknon proverbs; (5) look into the figurative language used in the proverbs; (6) note and analyze the situation when these proverbs are used; (7) find out how the culture or worldview of the people reflected in the proverbs; and (8) know the techniques employed in the translation of Inabaknon proverbs into English.

3. Methodology

This ethnolinguistic study was conducted in the municipality of Capul, Northern Samar.

Capul is an island town located at the northwest portion of the province of Northern Samar. It has been said that this was the first town established and evangelized by the Spaniards. Historically, the galleons from Mexico have docked at San Luis, Capul before they set sail on to Acapulco, Mexico. The name Capul was said to derive from the city of Acapulco. It has been said also that Moro vintas who had inhabited the islands and imbibed its culture which was at the same time influencing the island’s language. The language spoken is Inabaknon, but Tagalog and English can also be understood by the majority.

Thirty-seven (37) informants were chosen as the sources of the data and who met the criteria for this study. The criteria specified that the primary source or informants be Northehanons: sixty years old and above; known to be tradition bearers; those who had never gone beyond grade three to minimize the influence of the printed page and to authenticate their proverbs; and those who rarely left the place except for occasional visits to other towns or cities. Also tradition bearers who are professionals were included as data source to strengthen the folkloricity of the proverbs.

This research examined a people’s words and actions in narrative or descriptive ways more closely representing the situation as experienced by the participants. It made use of the ethnolinguistic and participant observation methods complemented by informal conversational interview and the interview guide approach. A personal interview schedule was used with an interview guide to elicit the background information of the primary sources of data. A tape recorder to record the proverbs and a camera for taking pictures of the informants were used in this investigation. While the interview was going on, the researcher observed the accompanying extra-linguistic features of the informants and recorded them in her journal. The researcher gathered 160 proverbs from the 37 informants from the twelve (12) barangays of Capul, Northern Samar.

The actual field work was conducted from October 2004 to December 2004. For authentication of proverbs, E. Arsenio Manuel’s test for folkloricity as contained in his guide was used. That is the proverbs must be recited, it has no authorship, its medium of transmission is by word of mouth, and variants must exist.

Effort was exerted to insure that the words from the proverbs were recorded as exactly as they were given by the informants and all the extra-linguistic features were noted down during the interview. In translating the texts, this research tried to render meaning as faithfully as possible so as to be understood by the readers. The classification of proverbs by Damiana Eugenio was used to categorized the Inabaknon proverbs. In translating the proverbs, the closes possible translation was considered. However, in some cases where there was no English equivalents to some words, the meaning was given consideration that the form of structure or word arrangement. The original terms were also retained to maintain the greater part of the meaning. For the readers' convenience, the original and English translations came after the Inabaknon proverbs.

4. Findings

The Collected and Translated Inabaknon Proverbs
A. General Attitudes towards Life and Laws that Govern Life
1. Patience and Perseverance
   I mag-antossikasakitan
   Mahalap i kabubuvason-na.
   S/He who sacrifices
   Will have a better tomorrow.
2. Cautiousness
   Gana’ sagdonngamara’at.
   There is no advice that leads to evil.
3. Gratitude
   I a’angaga ‘iagtulitsitinikan-na
   Ga’ikapada ‘iiraysi parade ‘iroyan-na.
   S/He who does not look back at his/her past cannot go where s/he desires.
4. Resentment
   Ako i magtapa, ako i magsugna’
   Katakha la ‘in magkakan.
   I pounded, I cooked, when finished, other reaped the glory. Or
   I was the one who cooked it, another ate it.
5. Death
   Kamatayonhamok
   I gana’ kalibrihan-na.
   From death alone
   Is there no escape.

B. Ethical Proverbs Recommending Certain Virtues and Condemning Certain Vices

1. Cautiousness
   I makusoglakang-na
   Malalom i ontu-g-na.
   The heavier the step
   The greater the fall.
2. Loyalty
   Kon i alla-moduwa
   Pabalikon I adda.
   If you have two spouses
   Return the other.
3. Promptness
   I magkallattulos
Mahayagrasya i saala’-na.
The early rises,
Receives bountiful graces.

4. Industry
    I a’ amadurutospanginabuh
    Niya’ kahalapan-nasidamuriallaw.
    S/He who is helpful
    Reaps something in return.

Time will come that you need some.

5. Thrift
    Dakawagtitibusondimu’an
    Kay aniya’ orasngaagkinahanglankaw.
    Don’t consume everything
    So that people will not be mad at you.

7. Humility
    Kombinditokkawhatobulusongapas
    Ngaga’ ikawakapapaddisigkasia’ amo.
    If some throws you a stone, throwback cotton
    So that you will not hurt him/her.

9. Respect
    Konmahalappagtratar-mosila’ina’a,
    Mahalap may lat i pagtratarsika’aw.
    If you treat others well,
    You will be treated well too.

10. Charity
    I a’adapatata’oaghigugma’
    Si mgaanggana’ pina’agisipagbuwan limos.
    A person should love those people
    Who do not have by being generous.

C. Proverbs Expressing a System of Values

1. Honesty
    Kon ay i sa’ad-mo
    Iya I tinumanon.
    What you promised
    You should fulfill.

2. Good Reputation
    Konniya’ humbo
    Aniya’ may api.
    If there is smoke
    There is fire.

D. Proverbs Expressing General Truths and Observations About Life

1. Adaptability
    Dakawagdadahulokay i dahuloiya i nagtestingan
    Dakawmawy
    latagpadamurikawka avmamakabarawasikadawa’an.
    Neither be the first for you will be tested;
    Nor be the last for you will bear the old.

2. On the Attitude of the Young and Present Generation
    I siraypati’ ina’anto
    Mahaya i dipirensya-na.
    Between yesterday and today,
    There is a great difference.

3. On the Attitude of Human Beings
    Konniya’ mahalapbinuhat- mo’ga’
    Lugodkina intumanI mara’ atlugodiayapirini i nagparatigamanan.
    People do not look on the good deeds of a person
    Rather tey look into their defects.

4. Obedience
    Tipada’ iray pa kamhamok,
    Tibalikna kami’.
    You are still going there,
    We are already returning.

5. Judgment
    Myintraskawagghusgasiditangnga’
    Husghahindahulo i kalugariong-mo.
    Before you judge others,
    Judge yourself first.

6. Sensitivity
    Malamma’ ngani’ a’a
    Makudatngani’ kayo.
    If it is soft then it’s human.
    If it is hard then it’s wood.

7. Talkativeness
    Gana’ mahimotrabaho
    Konsigehamoktabil.
    Nothing is accomplished
    By talking always.

8. Love of Pleasure and Relaxation
    I a’angamapinaturihon, makaliamaay.
    S/He who sleeps always dies early.

9. Modesty
    Ga’ipadugok i paraysimanok.
    Palay never comes near the chicken.

10. Contentment
    I a’angabagtokkuntentona.
    Each one who gets full is weaned.

11. Wooing
    Sikreto pa hamok
    Baliskadna i lamisa.
    It is still a secret;
    But the table has already been turned upside down.

12. Fame and Power
    I gahum-nasia’aapara’
    Pero i-gahum-nasiDiysoga’lapara’.
    The power of man fades
    But the power of God does not.

13. Ability
    I kulur-nasia akinakulawansigawas;
    Pero i abilidadsikalidad.
    The color of man is on the outside;
    But the ability lies in the quality.

14. Courage
    I a’aakonakasamaran
    Agdugang i kasug-na.
    A person when wounded
    All the more s/he becomes brave.

15. Repentance
    Abungolakapapamati’ ina’anto.

Volume 6 Issue 10, October 2017
www.ijsr.net
Licensed Under Creative Commons Attribution CC BY

Paper ID: ART20177625
DOI: 10.21275/ART20177625
2114
The Extra-Linguistic Features Accompanying the Proverbs
The extra-linguistic features that accompany in the Inabaknon proverbs were hand gestures which impress the functions coupled with the facial expressions usually wearing some degree of seriousness as to the wisdom and spirit of the proverb.

The Figurative Languages Used
The figurative languages used in the Inabaknon proverbs were conditional construction, analogy, simile, metaphor, hyperbole, contrast, comparison, and parallelism.

The Situation When the Proverbs are Used
The Abakan’s main reason for using proverbs is to render advice, sermon, and warning to others specially the young ones or it appeared that their function includes that of restraining, regulating, advising, and tempering. These where used when applicable and necessary.

The Culture or Worldview of the People Reflected in the Proverbs
The dominant culture or worldview of the people reflected in the collection and translation of Inabaknon proverbs is the Capuleño religiosity.

The Techniques employed in the Translation of the Inabaknon Proverbs into English
The techniques employed in the translation of the Inabaknon Proverbs took the form of free translation, functional equivalent, descriptive equivalent, word for word translation, and paraphrasing.

5. Conclusions and Implications
After thorough analysis and evaluation of the data gathered in this study, the following conclusions and implications are given.

1) Proverbs are still commonly heard and recited by the people of Capul as observed by the researcher. From the proverbs gathered, the researcher experienced that the Inabaknon proverbs are next to human nature if only to deduce from them the fundamental human traits. They are indispensable in the sense that they function to restrain and regulate, advise, and temper people. They are the bearers of the values of the people which have survived despite influx of foreign influence. Such proverbs are people’s precious possession, the best legacy from folk bearers who handed them down to the informants.

2) The collected proverbs were categorized according to the range and nature of subject matter like general attitudes towards life and laws that govern life (patience and perseverance, cautiousness, gratitude, resentment and death); ethical proverbs recommending certain virtues and condemning certain vices (cautiousness, loyalty, promptness, industry, thrift, consideration for others, humility, patience, respect and charity). With regard to proverbs expressing a system of values, 9 proverbs spoke of honesty and good reputation. On proverbs about life, 49 proverbs focused on adaptability, on the attitude of young and present generation, on the attitude of human beings, obedience, judgment, , sensitiveness, talkativeness, love of pleasure and relaxation, modesty, contentment, wooing, fame and power, ability, courage, repentance, perseverance, and inheritance); humorous proverbs (emotions and jokes); and miscellaneous proverbs (nature and confidence).

3) The inabaknon proverbs were structured as prose statements. Most of the proverbs were in couplets. However, neither rhyme nor measure was prominently discernible. The number of syllable composition was not consistent even when these were translated into English. What was observed was that in the English translations, there were lesser number of syllables in each translation compared with those written in the original.

4) Extra linguistic features accompanied the proverbs. Hand and head gestures impressed the functions emphasized by the facial expression usually wearing some degree of seriousness as top the wisdom and spirit of the proverb.

5) As oral literature, figurative language brought home the message of the proverbs. They included among others, conditional construction, analogy, smile, metaphor, hyperbole, contrast, comparison, and parallelism. The proverbs provided a more striking effect on the person for whom the expression was intended and made him/her accept the truth behind these utterances. Metaphor abounded in the proverbs although there were several variations in the utterances. Some sayings do not have rhymes.

6) From the analysis and readings of the proverbs, their functions that can be deduced include that of restraining, regulating, advising, and tempering. These proverbs were used whenever applicable or necessary. The proverbs have been learned from their parents, grandparents, relatives, friends, even from their children, and other people whom they associate with within the community including the people they respect aside from their parents, elders, or priests. These expressions or sayings were acquired in the home, from their friends or neighbors and from their socializing. These proverbs are used in casual or ordinary conversations, arguments arising among parents/elders and children, among siblings, and among neighbors and friends.

7) The proverbs are reflections of the values caught from parents and elders, from hard work, careful deep thought in any undertaking, good reputation, keeping ones word, adaptability, prescribing, proper behavior, and recognizing the will and power of god. They teach the virtues of patience, promptness, perseverance, industry, loyalty between husband and wife, honesty, charity, thrift, humility, respect, obedience, courage and contentment. One dominant worldview of the people reflected in this collection of proverbs is the Capuleño’s religiosity. The wisdom and spirit of the proverbs reflect the people’s attitudes toward life and those which govern life, general truth and observation of and in life, their work ethic, the people’s values system, and the lighter side of life which is humor.

8) Translated into English using the free translation techniques, they have been rendered understandable to readers who are non-native users of the language.

9) These proverbs are manifestation of their day-to-day activities, feelings and attitudes, and depicting their confrontation with the facts of life. This proves that Capul like any other place has a rich repertoire of beautiful proverbs embodying their sentiments handed down by word of mouth. Thus, it will sensitize the readers to an indigenous oral literature.

6. Recommendations

From the results of the study, the researcher makes the following recommendations.

1) The folklore be included in the high school curriculum as well as in the elementary as teaching materials so that from that star the student will recognize the importance of folklore and earlier they can begin retrieving and collecting those that have not been collected so far.

2) Other proverbs should be gathered in various places, towns, and barangays in Northern Samar as a way of preserving the people’s wisdom before they totally vanish.

3) Future thesis writers are encouraged to retrieve, collect, and translate NinorteSamarnon literature and study them for their literary merits. In so doing, the actual interview of the informants should be videotaped so that the extra-linguistic features of the informants could be recorded.

4) For them to appreciated, these proverbs may be recited first in class, before discussing the values, worldview or culture contained therein and the figurative language used. In this manner the students will develop an appreciation of the NinorteSamarnon culture, besides enjoying the Inabaknon proverbs.

5) The Inabaknon proverbs should be included in the literature classes so that the languages and culture should not be regarded as strange by students who do come from Capul.

6) The use of proverbs is highly effective in conveying one’s thought because of their imaginative treatment of the language. A literary appreciation of them would be a good research.

7) The proverbs need conclusion in DepEd values education program to enhance human development and strengthen the moral fiber of the people through familiar situations embedded in them, besides sensitizing the readers to indigenous oral literature.

8) it also recommended that another research be conducted comparing proverbs from different places focusing on the difference in cultural materials or nuances or retrieving proverbs in Northern Samar.

7. Acknowledgement

The researcher would like to express her deepest gratitude to her master’s thesis adviser, Dr. Lydia P. E. De L. Rosa, DALL and the Abaknons, the people of Capul, Northern Samar who served as informants. Likewise, to her very supportive husband, Reyson, for being her inspiration and acted as research arm. To her nephew, Ariel Kary C. Gordo, as her ever-ready encoder. And most of all to God, for his constant guidance in all her intellectual endeavors.

References

Volume 6 Issue 10, October 2017

www.ijsr.net

Licensed Under Creative Commons Attribution CC BY

Paper ID: ART20177625 DOI: 10.21275/ART20177625 2117