Abstract: The idea of ending poverty seemed absurd years ago, but now we have measures helping achieve the ruling. The key aim of this study is to investigate the role of social entrepreneurship in poverty alleviation in India. We aim to study previous investigations, associated with this study earlier while adopting this study method. We want to propose a conceptual framework to study the relationship between social entrepreneurship and organizational effectiveness. We also aim to explain various theories of change that social entrepreneurs have pursued in overcoming poverty in the country. The study will utilize qualitative methods to collect data of social enterprises organizations in the main cities in India. The data collected will be evaluated to determine how organizational effectiveness can help social entrepreneurship to overcome urban poverty. Although no single social enterprise venture had put a huge dent in poverty, there certainly have been many initiatives that have notable stories to tell about how they have helped poor people. The findings could benefit not only individual social entrepreneurs but also public, policy maker and firms by clarifying how much social entrepreneurship could be relied upon to help alleviate poverty as compared to government and business initiatives.

6. Results and Conclusion

The main goal of this paper was to recognize how social entrepreneurship has and can be used to address the issue of poverty in India. We've studied in in depth about what's social entrepreneurship and the way it influences the economic system. We have studied numerous social enterprises which particularly focus towards the intention of poverty mitigation. A few which includes Shati Life which offer loans to under privileged humans at nominal loan for the cause of starting a new commercial enterprise or any other business of their choice. Upaya social ventures offer employment and schooling centers for the poor people of society. We saw that there are few social enterprises that concentrate on a specific class of poor people like women or rural poor people. A number of them are Sheroes.in, Chetna Gala, Rangasutra and so on. After reading the operation of each of these social companies we can say that social organization may be very well capable of improving the standard of people and assist in preventing poverty. From this we can say that social entrepreneurship in itself has the capability of integrating factors of business and other volunteer sectors which focus in the direction of making like of common humans better through addressing the social troubles which includes poverty. After this in-depth study we can conclude that poverty can be addressed in following ways by currently operating social organization with use of the following ideas: 1. Talk and reach out to natives in rural and sub urban regions and offer them the benefit of industrialization. 2. Offer loans to under privileged human beings at low interest. 3. Ask people to attend school which will not only allow them to grow personally but become a self-dependent and might assist their family and now not rely on it. 4. Encouraging self-employment among rural regions that allows you to not only produce employment but also result in the development of the place in terms of heritage and culture. 5. Lessen the social gap among different parts of society by means of beginning an agency that integrate the human beings working in wealthy and backward societies. 6. Imparting vocational training to every age group of the society at low price. This can lessen illiteracy and will result in reducing social and economic problems which includes poverty.
